Cannon AFB hosts virtual meeting to update PFAS effort

CANNON AIR FORCE BASE, New Mexico - The 27th Special Operations Wing will host a virtual public meeting Sept. 15 at 5 p.m. to provide updates to the Department of the Air Force's on-going actions to address per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) -- identified at Cannon Air Force Base, New Mexico.

This is the third meeting of a planned series of quarterly meetings focused on the Air Force's response to PFAS. Environmental project managers from the Air Force Civil Engineer Center will review the status of the program and will answer questions from the public about the PFAS response. The Air Force welcomes and encourages public participation and involvement.

The virtual meeting is open to the public via Zoom and accessible by following the link:
